This Addendum forms a part of the contract documents and modifies the original ITB documents as noted below:

RESPONSE TO QUESTIONS AND INQUIRIES:

- Q1: I noticed that Kevlar ballistic panels were specified for the above job. Would there be any consideration in using bullet resistant fiberglass panels as a substitute? They offer the same UL752 rating as Kevlar but they are significantly less expensive. The differences are primarily in thickness and weight (Level 3 weights 4.9#/sqft and is about 7/16") – they are flat rigid panels and quite simple to install.
- A1: The AmorCore material may be substituted for the Kevlar ballistic panels listed in the specifications. This material should be easier to install and it can take a number of bullet hits without having to be replaced.
- Q2: What are the liquidated damages for this project? I can not find a stated amount t. Section 46 & 48 of General Conditions only refer to LD's but not to specific amounts.
- A2: There will not be any liquidated damages for this project.
